Welcome to iMeta

Finding The Talent In You

iMeta Training was founded in 2023 in Birmingham with a simple mission: create accessible, high-quality training opportunities for everyone, no matter your starting point.

Our small team of tutors, learner support staff, employment and recruitment officers and operations experts have decades of experience in adult education. We recognise and remove the barriers that many adults face in the West Midlands, from financial hardship to childcare difficulties, to managing neurodivergence and addressing confidence and self-esteem.

We deliberately provide opportunities to train in fast-growing sectors, ensuring that learners have clear pathways for progressing their careers and education after they complete their course. 8 out of 10 of our learners move onto new jobs in their chosen field, secure a promotion, or continue into further education at university or through an apprenticeship.

After succeeding in our mission in our hometown, we have made the exciting choice to offer our services to the rest of the UK, providing self-funded opportunities that offer the flexibility, affordability and quality that hard-working people need to continue their professional development.

Every part of the iMeta learning journey is designed so no learner is left behind. We find the talent in you.

Frequently Asked Questions

Who is the PRINCE2® Foundation best suited for?

The PRINCE2® Foundation certification is ideal for anyone looking to gain a strong understanding of project management principles. It's especially valuable for aspiring project managers, team members working on projects, and professionals seeking to formalise their project experience with a globally recognised qualification. No prior project management experience is required.

Is the examination included in the cost?

Yes – your PRINCE2® Foundation exam is included in the course fee. You'll receive an exam voucher and full instructions on how to schedule your online exam at a time that suits you.

What jobs can I apply for when I'm PRINCE2® certified?

With a PRINCE2® certification, you'll be well-positioned for roles such as Project Coordinator, Project Administrator, Junior Project Manager, PMO Analyst, or Business Analyst. It's also a valuable addition for professionals in operations, marketing, IT, or finance who contribute to project delivery and want to enhance their career prospects.

Will project management still be in demand in the age of AI?

Absolutely. While AI is transforming many industries, it enhances rather than replaces the need for project managers. Strategic decision-making, stakeholder communication, and adapting to change are all human-led skills that remain essential. Project managers who understand how to work alongside AI tools will be even more valuable in the years ahead.

What's the difference between Foundation and Practitioner?

The Foundation level introduces you to the principles, themes, and terminology of PRINCE2®, ensuring you understand how the method works. The Practitioner level builds on this by teaching you how to apply PRINCE2® in real-world scenarios. Foundation is about knowledge; Practitioner is about application.

I've also heard about Agile and Scrum qualifications. How does PRINCE2® compare to other options like APM or PMP?

PRINCE2® is a structured, process-driven methodology suitable across industries. In contrast, Scrum and Agile emphasise flexible, iterative delivery, ideal for software and product teams. APM and PMP offer broader frameworks focused on project management competencies. PRINCE2® is notable for its scalability, strong governance, and compatibility with Agile (via PRINCE2 Agile®). It's a solid choice for those seeking a versatile, recognised framework adaptable to various project types.
